The birth of an urban school

Between urban planning, ecology, tourism, and contemporary art, the Metropolitan Trails are urban infrastructures that renew our representations and our practices in the contemporary city. Metropolitan Trails are also open platforms that support ongoing education about the city from many different angles.

Wishing to share their know-how, several creators of the Metropolitan Trails in Europe have come together to found the Metropolitan Trails Academy, which in 2020, will publish a charter, a methodology guidebook, and a MOOC (Massive Open Online Course).

Target audience

Students and professionals in city planning, landscape architecture, consulting, geography, ecology, art, social sciences, photography, cultural mediation, alternative tourism, community education, local government services, local inhabitants, associations, city managers, elected officials...

Multi-site conference and workshops

Each module will take place over two days: a one-day walking conference (10€ registration fee) and an optional one-day workshop in small groups (100€ per module or 300€ for the entire course).

5 cities, 5 modules, 5 dates

To accompany these publications, a brand new introduction to the Metropolitan Trails will be offered in Spring 2020 in the form of a training course with 5 modules which will take place in 5 European partner cities (one lesson per city). Each module corresponds to one of the 5 lessons of the forthcoming MOOC (coming in early 2020).
